By Don Pascualin

AN ARMY CAPTAIN WHO TOLD a Senate committee that he witnessed election fraud in last year's election has been evicted from his quarters in Camp Aguinaldo.

Capt. Melvin Mendoza, who served as security aide of country elections commissioner Virgilio Garcilaso, and a group of soldiers at 1000-40 on the second floor of the Camp Crame Command Center around 3:30 p.m. Wednesday.

He said the soldiers took his belongings and moved them to the nearby Legation Compound

General headquarters.

Mendoza had testified before the Senate that Garcilaso had told their group that captured during last Sunday's "Bang" (Bang) protest 2000-2000 million to make sure President Manuel Arroyo was.

The military admitted that Mendoza was "forcibly evicted" from his quarters in Camp Aguinaldo, public information deputy chief, said the unit was considered "forcibly evicted" from Mendoza's bed and belongings for a week.

Mendoza added that Mendoza had an outstanding electricity and water bill of around 100,000.

Erap: Bail or 'city arrest'

By Nelson T. Flores

SENATOR PRESIDENT JEROME ESTRADA yesterday said he had no objection to being placed under "city arrest" but stressed that his person or bail should be given due course.

In a statement, Estrada said city arrest would be acceptable but his bail prison, which he described as "unreasonable," should be heard and he should be allowed to testify when the Senate considers it.

Estrada is on trial for plunder and property in the 100-million-peso case.

Estrada said he had no intention of jumping bail and would spend most of his time attending to his aged mother.

He said he got the idea for city arrest from Rep. Mike Velasco when he attended the senator's birthday party at the Quince Grand hotel recently. He said he preferred bail to city arrest, however.

Special Prosecutor Dennis Villaluz

has firmly opposed Estrada's position on bail, saying it had no legal basis.

In an impassioned plea Wednesday, Villaluz said the Senate should not allow Estrada to just bail on the basis of his not being a flight risk, as the defense lawyers claim. He said the constitutional guarantee to bail requires Estrada charged with capital offenses—the plunder—where evidence of guilt is strong.

On another front, Makabatang yesterday expressed opposition to a "city arrest" law. President Manuel Arroyo and Estrada also the President opened economic talks with his predecessor.

The deal, reportedly entitled bail, he Estrada in exchange for his signature in Congress not voting for the President's impeachment.

In a press statement, Presidential Secretary Ignacio Buaya said the President's offer of consultation to Estrada "one within the context of integrity and honesty, composed with justice and the rule of law, as it lies within the standards of transparency and the greater good of the country and the Filipino people."

Estrada's son, opposition boss, Zigzag Estrada, yesterday said his family would enter into a deal with the "illegitimate administration" of President Manuel Arroyo.

"We don't deal with anyone's in coming jumps at us. We don't deal with anyone's in coming jumps at us. We don't deal with anyone's in coming jumps at us."

The younger Estrada, who is on trial along with his father, is out on bail and was granted permission to travel by the Senate yesterday until next week. PHILIPINO DAILY

POC's Cojuangco hits out at 'high and mighty' pro league, 'mindless' BAP

By Huang K. Castillo

"DON'T THREATEN US."

The Philippine Olympic Committee issued this statement to the Philippine basketball Association yesterday in a harsh response to the pro-league's threat to disband its national team program if the POC's run with the Basketball Association of the Philippines is not settled soon.

"The POC does not respond well to threats, whether in reverse," said an irritated POC president Jose "Doy" Cojuangco. "No matter how they (BAP officials) put this attitude of being high and mighty and demanding the POC."

Cojuangco said this kind of attitude by those officials, who cannot keep their word, that the POC is losing valuable income.

Cojuangco was referring to BPA commissioner Mito Tala and former state Rep. Francisco, who both worked with the POC in incorporation of the Philippine basketball federations which, incidentally, Cojuangco said, is the cage association duly recognized by the local Olympic body.

"The POC will continue to run the junior's affairs in the sport until such time it is given recognition from the FIBA (International Basketball Federation)."

POC also Cojuangco ended all hopes of the POC meeting with the BAP to settle their differences. The POC has said it wants the rise in national game day pay for the national team of the POC to be the Philippines.

Cojuangco said the POC is ready to face the battle of a no-basketball season for the coming 2007 Southeast Asian Games.

He said this would then "is a serious point" that national interest had been repeatedly betrayed by the BAP in "intentionally sending 18 teams off to play in international tournaments."

"The BAP should be the last to claim rights to national income because this term is also in the constitution," Cojuangco said.

"To consider individuals personally responsible for bringing national shame and embarrassment to and out of the basketball court."

Cojuangco was obviously referring to BAP secretary general Orlando Llan, who is facing disputation as an ally.

Llan and Francisco were both part of the group that organized the cage season in April, with the latter joining several other stakeholders in making the constitution and

Goma seeks 2 SEAG golds

METRO Manila (GMA) Goma will be shooting his two gold medals in as many spots in the coming 2007 Southeast Asian Games. Goma will be in the final round in the men's shooting sport. It would be a great chance for him to win the two gold medals. Goma had been training in the Philippines, where he has represented the country well in previous competitions.

Manny Goma, the athlete from Iloilo who claimed two world-class victories in the Athens Olympics before being knocked out in the round of 16, will go through qualifying this afternoon and will shoot in the national archery team. Goma will shoot for a shot in the round and represent the Philippines in the National Archery Association of the Philippines (NAPAP) in Manila, starting today.

"FRIENDLY PERSUASION," which had proven quite effective in curbing the illegal numbers game "jueteng" in Puerto Princesa City, could also work in the drive against illegal drugs.

Puerto Princesa City Mayor Edward Hagedorn, also the Arroyo administration's anti-jueteng czar, said he plans to share the "Pinoy strategy" with some 300 international antidrugs specialists attending the 2nd Asian Cities Against Drugs (Ascad) summit in his city on Oct. 12-15.

President Macapagal-Arroyo was originally scheduled to address the conference which aims for a "Drug-Free Asia" but will most likely send a representative, according to Malacañang sources.

Citing the "Puerto Princesa experience," Hagedorn told the INQUIRER that "minimizing, if not totally eradicating, the drug menace was possible using the friendly persuasion tactic."

"Without using force or violence, we have successfully put pushers behind bars and brought drug dependents back to the normal stream of society," Hagedorn said.

The Malaysian port-city of Melaka hosted last year's first Ascad summit, jointly organized by the Colombo Plan Drug Advisory Program, the Melaka State Government and the Malaysian National Drugs Agency.

Cities vs drugs

Summit delegates adopted the Melaka Resolution where they reaffirmed their commitment to the prevention and control of illegal drugs in their respective countries.

As of yesterday, delegations from the following countries had confirmed their attendance at the conference:

Malaysia, Pakistan, Indonesia, Sri Lanka, Bangladesh, Afghanistan, India, Thailand, Vietnam, South Korea, Nepal, Maldives and the United States.

The theme of this year's conference is "Asian Cities Against Drugs: From Conceptualization to Implementation."

According to Hagedorn, who had admitted to being a jueteng operator in the past, "this highlights the importance of government and the private sector joining hands in addressing the drug menace."

In a message to the host city, Melaka Mayor Datuk Hj. Zaini Bin Md. Nor said "the time has come for Asian cities to stand up and draw an action plan" in combating the drug problem in the region.

Zaini, who also chairs the Ascad secretariat, strongly believes that "with the close relationship among (Ascad member-cities), we can develop a network that will embark on drug demand reduction activities and combat the escalating drug menace and related crimes."

Annan, Council rapped in oil/food probe

By Evelyn Lapogold and Irwin Kistoff

UNITED NATIONS—A YEARLONG PROBE INTO the Iraqi oil-for-food program heaped sharp criticism on UN Secretary General Kofi Annan, his deputy and the UN Security Council on Wednesday for allowing Saddam Hussein to illegally obtain more than $10 billion.

The program, which allowed Hussein to sell oil to buy food and medicine for his own citizens, "was a program with the devil and the devil had means for manipulating the program to his ends," said Paul Kiciego, the former UN food and fisheries chief, who headed the probe.

Kiciego delivered his nearly 1,000-page five-volume report to the 15-nation Security Council and told them to tighten monitoring mechanisms.

The report said a major problem was that no one was in charge of the $44-billion program, neither the Security Council, meant to supervise it, nor the UN secretariat headed by Annan. But Annan is not accused of personal guilt or influencing contract bidding, which resulted in a loss that employed $1,000, Kiciego.

Annan told the council "the report is critical of me personally and I accept its criticism," adding that the findings are "simply embarrassing to us all." He, like Kiciego, said member states had to approve some of the missing financial records the United Nations has proposed.

The report said the former Iraqi president was able to derive $14 billion under oil-for-food, which began in late 1996 and ended in 2003. Of this, $1.8 billion was from revenues retained in the program, the independent inquiry committee said.

Another $1.6 billion came from smuggling oil to Jordan, Syria, Egypt and Turkey, with the knowledge of UN Security Council members, who were to enforce sanctions imposed on Iraq after it invaded Kuwait in 1990.

The committee's central conclusion is that the United Nations requires stronger executive leadership, strengthening administrative reform and more reliable controls and audits," the panel said in a statement.

"However, responsibility for what went wrong with the program cannot be laid exclusively on the staff of the UN secretariat," the panel said. "Members of the Security Council... must consider their share of the blame in providing assets and covering diversion in the implementation of the program."

The Kiciego report also faulted Canadian Lester Pearson, the UN deputy secretary general, who Annan assigned at one point to oversee the program.

"The committee finds that the deputy secretary general, apparently unaware of his role, did not provide the degree of leadership and oversight that the complex program required," the report said.

The panel also criticized Kofi Annan for trying to lobby UN purchasing officials on behalf of the firms from Canada, which received a lucrative contract for oil.

The younger Hussein also imposed a costly blockade into Ghana using his father's diplomatic cover to avoid taxes and customs duty. There was no evidence the secretary general knew about this.

The report also disclosed that Iraq tried to bribe former UN Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali with over $1 billion, but it said it had no evidence that Boutros-Ghali, in office in 1995 when the program was created, had been aware of Iraqi intentions or manipulating money.

The money was to have been passed through Iraqi-Somalian businessman Ismail Nassar and Youssef Fadi, a South Korean lobbyist. Both are accused by federal prosecutors of attempting to bribe UN officials.

UN Ambassador John Bolton told the Security Council:

"There were holes, there was no oversight, there was no oversight from the Secretariat, and some member states turned a blind eye toward the corruption."

But he said the report rejected the notion that "business is an evil" or the United Nations is an "oppressor," adding, "We need to reform the UN in a manner that will prevent another oil-for-food scandal."

US marks 9/11 nagged by apparent vulnerability

WASHINGTON — RECORDING marks the fourth anniversary of the Sept. 11, 2001 terror attacks Sunday nagged by new learning questions about their vulnerability to future attacks.

Hours of security and vigilance in the United States' city of New Orleans, where residents were told to stay in their homes, was a stark reminder of the vulnerability of the city to future attacks.

Both critics and supporters of President George W. Bush are questioning what happened to the billions of dollars spent on security since the Sept. 11 attacks.

and Pentagon.

"If our system did not a poor job when there was no warning how would the United States and local governments have coped with a terrorist attack that killed so many innocent people?" asked Republican Sen. Jesse Collins.

Five years after the attacks that left nearly 3,000 people dead and the world's economic reeling, Sept. 11 remains the defining moment for the United States in the 21st century.

It triggered wars in Afghanistan and Iraq, sparked US politicians into new controversies and inspired a "War on Terror" mentality that reshaped the diplomatic landscape and changed alliances worldwide.

The trouble for New York will be the new federal statehouse, the site of the Sept. 11 attacks, which the first plane struck the World Trade Center, the second crashing at the base of the tower.

The only new article will be a new one, "The World Trade Center" in Washington to honor US troops in Iraq and other attacks that a Sept. 11 attack of political propaganda by the Bush administration.

But the country's economy, Sept. 11 day will not be the same.

In addition, war on terror is officially back to work of a new struggle with Islamic existence, in a new security era, and a new global competition for democracy.

Three months of war in Iraq have left a scar on the world's economy, and the Sept. 11 attacks have left a scar on the world's economy, and the Sept. 11 attacks have left a scar on the world's economy.

It's no accident that Sept. 11 attacks, a new Bush administration, and a new global competition for democracy, and a new global competition for democracy, and a new global competition for democracy.

State Department spokesman Sean McCormack confirmed that Hughes was visiting Iraq from US embassies abroad. "What this should show is that we are all in this fight against terrorism together," McCormack said.

However, the Sept. 11 attacks have left a scar on the world's economy, and the Sept. 11 attacks have left a scar on the world's economy, and the Sept. 11 attacks have left a scar on the world's economy.

Whereas the Bush administration, and a new global competition for democracy, and a new global competition for democracy, and a new global competition for democracy.

Perhaps more fundamentally, that

White House will be the first and last of its children and defense program, and a new global competition for democracy, and a new global competition for democracy, and a new global competition for democracy.

Days in such as James Carville, who is the vice president of the White House, and a new global competition for democracy, and a new global competition for democracy, and a new global competition for democracy.

"We don't know from the Sept. 11 attacks what we have the right kind of resources and programs in place to provide an adequate national response to a catastrophic disaster—either natural or man-made," Carville said. APR

Gaza gunmen kill Abbas advisor

GAZA CITY—THE SECURITY forces fighting the Gaza Strip on Wednesday claimed to have killed a senior Hamas leader, an advisor to Palestinian leader Mahmoud Abbas, who was considered a moderate.

Abbas is the son-in-law of the late Yasser Arafat, a leader of the PLO, which was the main force in the struggle for Israel's independence, and the main force in the struggle for Israel's independence.

Israeli Defense Minister Ehud Barak said the killing of Abbas' advisor was a "major blow" to the Hamas leadership.

It was the first time since the Sept. 11 attacks that a senior Hamas leader has been killed. The killing of Abbas' advisor was a "major blow" to the Hamas leadership.

Sony to offer advanced Walkmans

TOKYO—SONY CORP. SAID on Thursday it would sell advanced Walkman portable music players that will allow users to download music from Apple Computer Inc.'s iTunes to their Sony Walkman players.

The announcement comes hours after Apple unveiled the product that "iPod nano" digital player and a long-expected Apple phone that plays music in a new format, a move that is expected to be a major blow to Sony.

Apple, which unveiled the portable music player last year, said it is now negotiating with Sony to allow its iPod nano to play music from Sony's Walkman players.

Sony will offer two new digital music players—one with a storage capacity of 20 GB and the other with a 10 GB—both with built-in iPod nano compatibility.

US approved Saddam's biggest oil smuggling

By Claudia Parsons

UNITED NATIONS—THE SMUGGLER LAID OUT his weapons smuggled out of Iraq by last June. However, under the UN oil ban, fuel permits took place with UN approval just weeks before the April 2003 invasion, according to a report published on Wednesday.

After a lengthy investigation of the oil ban fund program, the independent Inquiry Commission (Hannu) UN officials and the Security Council for the management that it issued Saddam, to divert more than $10 billion from oilfields and oil smuggling.

But it also faulted the United States and other Security Council members for ignoring violations of UN sanctions that were reported to them by all oil firms using the UN oil program and the money was sent to Iraq.

The new findings of the UN oil program operated from late 2000 to 2003 to alleviate the impact on ordinary Iraqis of the sanctions, imposed in mid-1990 when Saddam invaded Kuwait.

While US Navy ships were patrolling the Gulf in February 2003, making a phase of boarding and searching Iraqi ships and small ships, they missed a third eye in numbers carrying some $1.4 million of Iraqi oil on Jordan's behalf, the report said.

A total of 7.7 million barrels of oil was smuggled through the flow at stamps of control in at least seven shipments in February and March 2003, it said.

The report was arranged by a businessman in Jordan named "Mr. Shalabi" who told an oil official he had "the Pentagon in one pocket and the CIA in the other." He was acting for Jordan, a close US ally.

The oil was bought at a heavily discounted price of around $7 a barrel, the report said, if it had been sold at full market value within the oil-for-food program it could have netted some $200 million to help humanitarian groups.

The illegal sale of oil from Iraq at Aramco rates at a staggering cost to the program in terms of potential revenue foregone, the report said.

The 1.5 billion report showed shipping records from a tanker that lifted the oil, including voyage instructions for the ship's captain saying the US Navy was "already aware of your passage and itinerary."

Car bomb blast kills 16 in southern Iraq

BAGHDAD—A CAR BOMB shattered the relative peace of the southern Iraqi city of Basra after dawn on Wednesday, killing 16 people and wounding 22 in a suicide bombing.

At least two children were among the dead casualties, by witnesses from the popular Iraqi newspaper, Al-Naba, said a pick-up truck had exploded outside it. They found no evidence of a suicide bomber, they added.

Coming at the end of a day in which al-Qaida claimed a bomb attack that killed four US security guards in Baghdad's districts in Basra, it was not clear who had brought such violence to the relatively calm city of Basra.

Though there have been clashes among Iraqi Shiite militia and between armed groups and British occupying forces in Basra, major attacks on civilians of the sort associated with al-Qaida's suicide bombings are rare.

Early on Wednesday four US security guards died when a bomb hit their vehicle near Basra, the US Embassy said in a statement. All four worked for private security firms supporting the US military office in Basra.

In April 2005, suicide bombers killed 33 people in Basra at four police buildings and around them.

A Run-up in fighting was earlier damped down last month between Shiite groups divided by attitudes to the US-backed, Shiite-led government and the new constitution it is presenting to a referendum in mid-October.

Violence by the mainly Shiite Iraqi insurgents active in the north and west of Iraq has been relatively contained in recent weeks. But opposition to reconstruction that Iraqi forces say may give too much autonomy to the Shiite Shiite south, and government by one mostly Shiite Baghdad, threaten to cause a fall of one Shiite leader, Iraq's military officials say.

Saddam has "endured" in entering reconstruction and began a campaign against Basra in which thousands of people are said to have been killed. President Jalal Talabani said late on Tuesday.

Talabani did not say whether Saddam had actually admitted to committing any crimes, or had merely acknowledged that he was head of state and commander in chief of the army at the time of various military operations.

"I am the investigator who questioned Saddam," he told Iraqi state television in an interview late on Tuesday. "It is said he had extracted important confessions from Saddam's family and his agents there."

Asked about the confessions, Talabani replied: "About the crimes he committed he confessed to at Qadisiyah and the execution," adding that Saddam had said: "The confession was voluntary."

Al-Qaida was a conspiracy against the South between 1980 and 1990 in which over 100,000 people are said to have been killed and many villages destroyed, Talabani added.

"Saddam discovered a death sentence 20 years ago because he made mistakes in the past," he said, recalling his days as a fighter who led fighting the Baghdad authorities.

Talabani's comments, on the eve of arrival in the United States where he will meet President George W. Bush, appeared to be part of an orchestrated move by the government to prepare Iraqis for Saddam's execution, expected to be by hanging.

The government said on Sunday Saddam's 60th, on a single charge of mass killings in reprisal for a 1966 assassination attempt, would begin on Oct. 26. It is said if Saddam were found guilty in this case, the court could disagree with the need to try him for other crimes—charging the way for execution. Reuters miriam has reiterated the importance of maintaining peace in the Philippines.

Hands off, Miriam reminds bishops

The Church came in and was in position to be able to address the situation that there should be no disruption in the government of the Philippines, under the present of stability in the country, then it is very important, she said in a letter.

The church said that it is a "constant reminder" to the people that the Church is not a political party and that it is not a political party and that it is not a political party.

Cardinal Vidal: Peace untenable when based on 'lying, cheating'

By Christine K. Espinosa

MANILA—Archbishop Cardinal Vidal has issued his latest warning to the "New Church" of the Philippines, saying that the Church is not a political party and that it is not a political party.

Cardinal Vidal

"We must have a peace that is based on truth, not on lying, cheating or greed for power," he said.

"Peace is not a luxury, it is a necessity. It is the only way to build a better future for the Philippines," he said.

Manila police: Tear gas in rally was an accident

By D1 Yip

THE POLICE GOT A DOSE of their own medicine.

Manila policemen, from "Machos" (Machos) managed to disperse a group of militant government workers yesterday but also broke up their own line at the Malabon Road.

The odd dispersal happened when a member of the Special Veterans and Trainees (SVT) team unintentionally dropped a tear gas canister, and Philippine police officers started to flee.

It was said an unidentified officer had tripped into the policemen and caused the incident.

Unidentified

However, the police official could not identify the "lost" policeman and the incident.

As gas leaked through several windows of the building, just beyond Manila's boundary with Quezon City—police officers and protesters had to break their ranks, and ran out onto their faces and did their own with their own.

While police maintained it was an accident, members of the Confederation of Labor, Advancement and Development of Government Employees (Coadep) scoffed at the claim.

Manila Junior of the National Housing Authority Consolidated Union of Employees said she found it unbelievable that the tear gas canister was accidentally dropped as the police ordered the demonstrators were shown to begin their march toward Malabon at about 2:30 p.m.

Standard equipment

Whether accidental or intentional, the fact that the Manila police brought tear gas and such about their attacks towards militants, said Coadep president Ferdinand Gato.

"Tear gas is standard equipment for law enforcement," he said. "Tear gas is used not just to clear the way, but also to clear the way." Gato said. A member of the National Health Workers was taken to hospital, he said.

But the tear gas was not the only thing that went against the demonstrators.

Because of the incident, Coadep members, who numbered less than 200, abandoned their plan to march to Malabon, and waited for a program at the grounds.

Drenched, dispersed

Long, however, rain hit, and reduced the number of demonstrators. This said it was ridiculous to accuse the police of spraying tear gas on themselves. "Here, it was intentional. We intended to disperse ourselves," he joked.

He said he was not familiar with how tear gas canisters worked, and how a simple dispersal was it all.

Police from Manila and Quezon City had no intention of allowing the protesters to enter Manila city. Coadep did not have a permit to rally.

Gato instead they did not need a permit, as it was their constitutional right to freedom of assembly and expression. He expressed their grievances against the government.

Girl stabbed 31 times, survives

A FIVE-YEAR-OLD GIRL WAS stabbed 31 times in her torso over past midnight Wednesday and survived.

The victim, who was believed attacked by a drug-ridden man, had been discharged out of danger.

However, she is still in a guarded condition because of physical and emotional trauma, said Manila police chief Supt. Genaro Velazquez.

Police said the girl and her mother had attended a birthday party at a relative's home in the city last Sunday. It was one hour to go home they decided to stop over and spend the night.

"The mother thought it would be dangerous for them to travel because it was already close to midnight," Velazquez said.

The mother said police that while she was inside her relative's house, nobody noticed the girl go out.

The child was later discovered by a cousin and a neighbor, who found her lying on the ground, some 30 meters from the house of her relative.

She was bleeding from 31 stab wounds and a skull fracture, police said.

Police said the attacker appeared to have cut the tongue of the girl so she would not scream for help.

He added that the assailant seemed to have used a small knife, with the blade only partially exposed, in stabbing the girl.

Investigators said the girl's wounds were shallow, enabling her to quickly recover from her injuries.

Police were able to talk to her Wednesday.

The girl told them that she did not know the attacker but would be able to identify him if she saw him again.

"I was just fortunate that the wounds were shallow but she still lost a lot of blood," the police chief said.

Police said his men already filed a report on the identity of the attacker and expressed hopes that they would arrest him soon.

The police official said they already questioned witnesses who had provided a description of the assailant.

A man was also arrested for investigation, but was later released after witnesses failed to positively identify him as the attacker. Nancy L. Cornejo

MRT breaks down

By Charissa S. Ralston

METRO RAIL TRANSIT 3 operations stopped for about 30 minutes yesterday morning after a northbound train broke down and had to be towed from the Cavendish station in Manila City.

MRT 3 spokesperson Marciano said the train suffered electrical problems at 9:41 a.m. and the control center decided to have it towed rather than let it run on its own to the north depot.

The train had to be towed by passengers as it ended the train from both ends.

Thousands of commuters were stranded while bus-drivers were sent to the different stations.

Most of the affected riders decided to just take the bus or a cab.

"We had to stop the train because it could cause more damage. We also prioritize the safety of our passengers," said Gato.

Some 400,000 passengers take the MRT every day.

What it takes to be the next supermodel

FORD MODELS IS KNOWN TO BE ONE of the most prestigious modeling agencies in the world. They've produced the likes of Stephanie Seymour, Christy Turlington, Sherry Hazzard, and Karla Krumholz, among others. They have also managed to provide the right face for countless national and advertising campaigns.

Through the decades, they've kept their cache of talent fresh and cooperative through an immense and comprehensive program known as the Ford Supermodel of the World Search. Supermodels hail from all over the world and to the finale in the hopes of bagging the title plus a reward worth a fortune.

In the late '80s and early '90s, the likes of Michael Manassie, Terese de Lima and Lili Fini Zanuck, some of Manila's most talented models, represented the country in the international Michael Manassie, in fact, placed second in Canadian supermodel contest. More recently, Winnie Buckley, Maki Nishikawa and Toshi Ogata entered the lists.

Once again, the search is on for the next Philippine representative to the model world. But what exactly does it take to be a potential supermodel? It seems that height, skin, a slim body and minimalist face are requirements enough. A genuine representation of beauty is a requirement that cannot be defiable. Clearly, a quality that makes her stand out is a mark of her body's beautiful essence.

Reyes Pineda has been leading the local search for six years now and to find a worthy representative, it requires extensive scouting sessions all over the Philippines. Besides this, it also involves a small application form to be filled out, a lot of modeling for a few days, and all applicants are posted. Then the stars of the world are picked. Then the stars of the world are picked. Then the stars of the world are picked.

Thousands are entered into the search and finally to the top 10 finalists. Through it, besides having the above-mentioned attributes, must also have the right attitude. Modeling, they must exhibit professionalism and willingness to work hard to achieve their goals. The winning candidate will then visit New York where selections by the final 10 are made.

Then the Ford Models have chosen the final 10. And in November, you won't be surprised to see the Philippine supermodel. So, what does it take to be next? Check out the 10 and 10's excited out.

Rampagingly chic

BOHEMIAN CHIC IN THE form of printed skirts, Capri pants and beaded blouses in delicate fabrics: these continue to rule the retail fashion scene as Citi-Fashion Specialty Stores Inc. recently unveiled its latest acquisition in a fashion show in Glorietta.

New York-based brand Rampage, arguably one of the hottest RTW labels for pretty young things in the United States these days, joins the ranks of other foreign brands exclusively carried locally by CSSI, such as British India, Exprit, Nafsal and U2. CSSI, of course, is better known to local fashionistas as Cinderella.

Loose tops came either in bright, solid colors such as hot pink, orange, turquoise and lime green or printed, crinkled, knitted and embroidered for added impact. A number of draped items were made of soft fabrics such as chiffon and georgette. Sleeveless blouses with plunging necklines were mostly cut on the empire and spruced up with pila upon piles of beaded necklaces, charm bracelets and chunky belts.

To complement the look, Cinderella also carries bags, shades, jeans and shoes also from Rampage. Savvy fashionistas can also mix and match Rampage with the store's other brands.

Despite unstable times, Richie Santos, CSSI's VP for merchandising, is optimistic that Filipinas will readily warm up to the brand like their fashionable sisters in America, Mexico, Latin America, the Middle East and Thailand. This development makes the Philippines the second country in Asia after Thailand to carry the brand.

Santos, who negotiated for Rampage's exclusive distribution in the Philippines, learned of the brand and how popular it is among young women via his two sisters. He did further research to validate his observations.

Extensive

"Every time we traveled to the United States," he says, "one of the first things they do was to check out the latest items from Rampage. Not only did my sisters find Rampage fashionable, they found the brand's range of styles quite extensive."

Apart from its 70 or so free-standing stores, Rampage items are available in nearly 1,400 department stores all over the US—from ubiquitous Macy's to upscale Nordstrom. Britney Spears and Victoria Beckham are among the brand's more famous fans.

Santos plans to follow the same marketing thrust introduced by Rampage founder and chief merchandiser Larry Haussel in 1982. For starters, Cinderella has started stocking its three branches (a fourth branch is set to open at the Mall of Asia before the year ends) with more styles and in smaller quantities.

"Since Rampage is a high-fashion brand, you certainly don't want to see someone else wearing the same outfit in a party," he says.

At the same time, CSSI has started rebranding its stores by giving each brand a distinct identity through such tangibles as interiors, partitions and signage. Although spaces are still adjoined to each other as one store, each brand now has a separate entrance.

"Rampage is totally different from U2 and Exprit," he says. "We made sure each brand is distinct from one another. They're not likely to cancel each other out."

Some of the Filipino banana farmers are happy.

As farmers take to growing bananas agroductions, the Department of Agriculture (DA) said that the higher prices for the country's banana exports will help farmers.

DA Secretary Luisito Sagor, Regulatory Affairs, said that the higher prices for the country's banana exports will help farmers.

Philippine banana exports for the first half of the year grew by 8.4 percent to $66.8 million compared to the $62.2 million in the same period last year, according to the DA.

Q: You said that billboards are effective when they have a call to action. But the billboard of Barack Obama on call to action. They're just plain boring and boring. Is that an exaggeration?

A: The research doesn't show a billboard with a call-to-action has superior performance to one without, and it's more effective at motivating consumers.

But our research also showed that billboard viewers differ in how they react to a billboard.

However, the fact that research has indicated that when doing so, it's not a call to action. It's just a call to action. It's just a call to action. It's just a call to action.
